KENTUCKY RIFLEMEN.

The renown which the Kentucky riflemen have obtained for precision and skill in handling the rifle has become world-wide, and excited the attention and wonder of the warriors of other nations. In battle they have stood as cool and collected—although the first time in action—as the oldest veterans of Europe, pouring in their deadly fire with unerring aim.

'I shot that officer,' exclaimed a rifleman, as he saw an officer fall at New Orleans.

'No, no, I shot him,' said his comrade at his side.

'If I shot him, I shot him in the right eye.'

'And I shot him in the left eye,' was the response.

After the battle, it was found that the officer had been shot in both eyes.

This unerring precision can only be obtained by long practice and thorough drilling. At the first settlement of their State they were compelled to be constantly under arms, as it were, to guard against the wily Indian, and escape the murderous tomahawk. As the father, so the children grew up, taught, in the earliest infancy possible, to poise the rifle and direct its aim. As ammunition was not always conveniently to be had, the father would dole out to his son a certain number of charges for his rifle, for each one of which he must bring home some sort of game, or get a taste of hickory for each missing shot.

Many years ago I was conversing with my father on the wonderful skill of the Kentuckians, when he related to me the following anecdote:

'I was out in the wilds of Kentucky, some years before the war, on a surveying expedition, and had an opportunity of studying the character of the early settlers for a considerable period of time. It became necessary for me to stop a few days at a log built tavern, and to while away the time, I took my trusty rifle and explored the woods for game, of which there was abundance. The landlord of the tavern had a fine little son, about ten years old, who sometimes accompanied me with his rifle, and always had extremely good luck. On one occasion the fates seemed to be adverse to him, for perceiving a squirrel on a very high branch of a tree, he up rifle, blazed away and down came the squirrel. The look of dismay with which he viewed his game I shall never forget. Dropping the butt of his rifle on the ground, he burst into tears. In the utmost surprise I inquired what was the matter. He answered, 'Daddy will lick me.'

'Lick you! what for?'

'Because I didn't hit him in the head.'

'I soothed him all I could, but his day's pleasure was over. On returning to the tavern, I interceded for him all in my power to save him from the hickory, but it was no use, the application must be made, if only for the sake of example.

'No, no, stranger; if I let him off, I break a standing rule of our State,' said dad. 'I never was let off, and what was good for me is good for him. He must shoot right, or put up with what he gets.' The hickory was applied, but no bones were broken.'

Such training as that, which was universal in those parts, tells the secret of Kentucky rifle-shooting.

A man of wit once said right enough—'He who finds a good son in law, gains a son—he who finds a bad one, loses a daughter.

FROM THE NATIONAL ERA.

The acting Editor of the Era is quite liberal, he gives both sides. For one thing in it, we give him credit, it is from the Richmond Examiner—

"The real truth is, that those same pharisaical New England States, thanking God they are not as others, are the moral plague spots of our land. There is more prostitution and wantonness in the single city of Boston than in all the States south of the Potomac put together. The people of New England have made the word Yankee synonomous with Cheat over the whole civilized world. Where did the degrading superstitions of Mormonism originate? Where did magnetism, mesmerism, clairvoyance, first find footing in this land? Where are the Rappeeres?—Where are all the isms? Where are the Atheists and the Infidels—the enemies of Christ and the bold blasphemers of God. Mormonism, mesmerism, spirit rappings—such things can only thrive in North. They find no footing in the South. The Godsfearing, Bible reading clear headed people of the Southern States give no countenance to Barnums of trade or Barnums of philosophy. They obey the laws, reverence the Constitution adhere to the faith of their fathers and their race.

We believe no other population in the world is so fair dealing, or so little addicted to the licentious vices. Uncorrupted by towns and trade, subsisting by agriculture, living in the open country, their minds are not frittered away by chicanery and consequent skepticism, nor do their bodies become enervated by the luxuries of current wealth and a dense population. These things not having become necessary to them, they are enabled by the cheapness of their living to marry when poor and young, and they do so. The ties of the hearthstone bind them to their country, its laws, its morals, and its faith. They are still the same independent yet conservative population that they were in the days of the Revolution. Against such population, the surging, varying opinions and licentious ideas of the North break as the sea upon the rocks. No new nonsense thrives with them. Their stern faith and conservative morality constitute the hope and the anchor of this Government. If the whole land were filled with people like those who fill New England and New York, a Government like ours would not exist a day."

☞ 'Mike, and is it yerself that can be afther telling me how they make ice cream?'

'In truth I can—do they not bake them in cowld ovens, to be sure.'

Why is an oyster the greatest paradox in the world? Because it has a mouth, but no teeth, a beard, but no chin, and is taken out of bed to be tucked in.

'A chiel's amang ye ta'en notes,' said a pickpocket to himself, as he was one day 'relieving' a crowd of gentlemen of their pocket books.'

OLD AGE.—Beautiful is old age, beautiful as the slow dropping mellow autumn of a rich glorious summer. In the old man, nature has fulfilled her work: she loads him with her blessings; she fills him with the fruit of a well spent life, and surrounded by his children and his children's children, she rocks him softly away to a grave to which he is followed with blessing. God forbid we should not call it beautiful. It is beautiful, but certainly not the most beautiful. There is another life—hard, rough and thorny—trodden with bleeding feet and aching brow, the life of which the cross is the symbol, a battle which no peace follows, this side of the grave—which the grave gasps to finish before the victory is won, and strange that it should be so, this is the highest life of man. Look back along the great names of history, there is none whose life has been other than this.

It is doubtless true that the number of murders committed in this country, as compared with Great Britain, is alarming, yet we must remember that the majority of murders here are perpetrated by foreigners. Little else can be expected when we receive the pauper refuse of Europe.

From the Republic.

"The New Organ of the Young Democracy. The Ming or Fogy Dynasty in danger.

Le Republicain, a spirited paper published in New York, thus heralds the birth of the new organ of Young Democracy. It says;

'The mystery which surrounded the origin and principles of the new Democratic paper to be established in Washington is no longer a secret from any one. We have it from an undoubted source that the new journal will range itself along with the daily and other sheets which every day swell the ranks of the defenders of Young America. Its central position at the head of the Federal Government will enable it in a measure to concentrate as in a focus, and to reflect again on all the States of the Union, those doctrines of progress which is the soul of the Democratic party, and to operate upon public opinion with a force which no other journal has ever heretofore done."

"For more than twenty years, thanks to the Old Fogies, the Democracy has only had the force of numbers, it has never possessed the influence of intelligence. Trained in ignorance to follow its chiefs, it left at one time the Whigs masters of the field of battle.

It might have been vanquished in the struggle, if God, who is with the people, had not saved them from the peril by stretching forth his powerful hand. But the day has come when a change must take place. Old parties are extinguished—new ones are on the eve of being born. The Young Democracy has enlisted the intelligent minds of the country.—Relieved of its obstructions, it will reorganize its ranks, and boldly throw itself upon the path of the future. Where is the banner of Young America? It is everywhere, and it is nowhere. Every one feels it in the atmosphere, and yet is not perceived. But let it once be displayed and the phalanxes of Democracy will march under its colors. Discipline will succeed confusion. They will reconnoitre they will compute their strength, and once confident in the organization of their forces, the new party will march to the certain victory which awaits it."

THE ABSENT HUSBAND.

Wife, who in thy deep devotion,
Puttest up a prayer for one
Sailing on the stormy ocean—
Hope no more—his course is done!
Dream not, when upon thy pillow
That he slumbers by thy side,
For his corse beneath the billow
Heaveth with the restless tide.

Children, who as sweet flowers growing,
Laugh amid the sorrowing rains—
Know ye many clouds are throwing
Shadows on your sire's remains?
Where the hoarse, gray surge is rolling,
With a mountain's motion on,
Dream ye that its voice is tolling
For your father—lost and gone?

When the sun looked on the water,
As a hero on his grave,
Tinging with the hue of slaughter
Every blue and leaping wave,
Under the majestic ocean,
Where the giants currents rolled,
Slept thy sire without emotion—
Sweetly by a beam of gold.

And the violent sunbeams slanted,
Wavering through the crystal deep,
Till their wonted splendors haunted
Those shut eyelids in their sleep.
Sands, like crumbled silver gleaming,
Sparkled through his raven hair,
But the sleep that knows no dreaming
Bound him in its silence there.

So we left him, and to tell thee
Of our sorrow, and thine own,
Of the woe that then befel thee,
Came we weary and alone,
That thine eye is quickly shaded,
That thy heart's blood wildly flows,
That thy cheek's clear blood is faded,
Are the fruits of these new woes.

Children, whose meek eyes inquiring,
Linger on your mother's face,
Know ye that she is expiring?
That ye are an orphan race?
God be with you on the morrow!
Father, mother, both no more!
One within the grave of sorrow,
One upon the ocean's floor!

The newspapers around the country are recording deaths from sun stroke and drinking cold water while the blood is heated with exercise. The midday sun should be avoided as much as possible, and cold water should be drank sparingly.

This will be the most comprehensive Educational Periodical ever issued from the Press. It will include a regular course of instruction in every department of knowledge. It proposes to introduce the people to all the departments of Human Knowledge, and to afford to individual man the means of a complete secular education.

Each number of the Educator will contain articles in several of the departments. The lessons in Geography will be accompanied with maps engraved on copper; and the Lessons in every other department which can admit of it will be illustrated by diagrams, engravings and drawings, nothing which artistic skill can do, to embellish the several subjects, will be neglected.

The Popular Educator has received an encouraging welcome from the people throughout the length and breadth of the United States. They have clearly given it a most cordial reception into the great family of periodicals. The publisher feels that he has met one of the public wants. SLAVERY IN INDIA.

We think it would be more becoming and much more in character in the Duchess of Sutherland, to implore sympathy and urge the immediate redress of the grievances of the people of India, and by her own Government.

We have, with many others, endeavored to turn her sympathy, and that of her thousand female friends—if there be any sympathy in their flinty hearts, toward the suffering poor of their native land,—But if they must need go abroad in preference, let them go and free their own slaves in India—Are these not hypocrites?

"Slavery in Travancore,—The journals in British India are calling attention to the abject and debasing nature of the slavery in which thousands of the natives of India are held in the provinces subject to British rule. In Travancore this servitude assumes its most repulsive form, 164,864 persons being slaves in every sense of the word. They are divided into three classes, one of which the worst treated of all called Government slaves, consists of those who are not allowed to purchase their own freedom. These are hired out to second and third hands, and the necessity of paying three several taxes causes the third hand to work them as near death as he dare venture. When the slave gets too old to work, he is turned out to beg or starve. The field slaves, who constitute another class, are worked harder than free laborers, receive barely enough food to sustain life, and are frequently cruelly treated. In 1842, the Madras Government made some remonstrances on the subject to the Rajah of Travancore; but the large slaveholders talked so threateningly that no further action was taken."

Take people who praise themselves, upon any ground, and you will find them unprincipled and rotten to the core, depend on them they are sure to deceive you—no people praise themselves more than the British, and none lay higher claims to eminence in every relation of life: see how well they fulfil. Can these boasting bags of wind be Christians? Be that as you will they are as different kind of people from Christians as the tiger from the lamb.

But who are these people who would overturn our Government as they would a football, where did they spring from? We know from history these in this country sprung from a race that left England to escape persecution from their christian brethren, and when they settled here they bid farewell to that christianity which they never possessed unless the wildest fanaticism and vindictive cruelty which led them on to the most wonton and brutal murders of innocent men and women. But the venom still lurked in their hearts,—they hated all mankind, and all christian sects but their own sort,—Many of them however, fought like tigers in the revolution: while some of our best officers were appointed from the New England States: but the latter were gentlemen of the highest honor and learning, the former would not, or could not take learning, they had not the intellect or talent, which you please to receive it.—That gift of nature seems to be wanting in their brain, and from the want of understanding the vacancy it should have occupied, is filled with fanaticism, hence they imagine every one who differ with them on christian worship to be in error and that they are in the right. From the same cause, want of comprehension, many of them become maniacs, and the asylums in New England are filled with them.—

But to go on.

We have already done them the justice of classing them with our revolutionary patriots—but the war was no sooner ended than these steeple chace riders came into Congress vi & armis, and demanded a repeal of the 'Satanic' law, meaning the liberty of conscience. 'We want our religion secured to us by law, what did we fight for?' &c: Such was their rage when they failed in their attempt to be revenged, they consulted their churches, leaders, or what not, till in a few years a plot was organized, by whom is not exactly known, but from the number of foreign Presbyterian ministers that visited this country, chiefly from England, we may guess that the Government had a hand in it, as they had just received a good whipping at New Orleans, and were thirsting for revenge.

But we are to show how the whole party came into being. It was done by corrupting our females—they collected millions of women and formed them into societies in every city, town and village, had the same aggregate of societies throughout the United States, viz,

The Bible Society,
The Tract do
The Sunday School, do
The Sunday School Union, do
The Indian's Education, do
A Society for educating young men for the ministry, do
Then there were the Home & Foreign Missionary, do

Had these Societies been formed from just motives, they might have been a lasting blessing to our Republic. But the motives were unjust, base and treasonable, and the manner in which they have been conducted is a lasting injury to the country. That which gave form to the party and which are now preying upon our vitals, is the society for educating young men,—the women who undertook this business, must have been deeply imbued with a preference for the other sex, at whose instance the world was turned upside down for means to raise money to educate these youths. Their own business was neglected, husbands and children were nearly starved for want of food, mothers, sisters, daughters, all absent nearly every night in the week, at prayer-meetings, collection meetings, while others were engaged in hunting up the young men and little boys, poor creatures, none but the poorest cases of course could be obtained. Little fellows the color of the pot, others covered with clay from following carts and wagons, anything they could lay hold of in human shape. These however, might have made respectable and worthy men had they not been bent the wrong way.—Their fitness for divine instruction, or associating even with menials, may well be imagined when it is known they received board upon charity at one dollar per week—this was in Philadelphia, and probably in all other cities; it may have been the same, and tuition likewise gratis of course, though we cannot say as to that.

Thousands of these not half educated gawks, untaught in politeness, or any of the common attainment, with the gloom of night stamped upon their countenance, from which every smile and every trait of nature is banished—were turned loose upon the unsuspecting people: prepared at all points so far as their mental powers were capable, to do them all the injury they dare in every possible way that injury could be inflicted, and while thus employed the females generally sustained them, under the pretence of spreading the gospel. This is the origin of the third party, which has now become a terror to the land, and all through female influence, who at this moment are negotiating treaties no doubt, with the greatest potentates on earth for our destruction. Call ye these christians? Are they honest heathens? Are they men? Doubtful.

THE CHOLERA.

We have the Cholera amongst us, but in a moderate type as yet. But our greatest fears are for our friends in the West, where we have many, and this dreadful scurge delights in revelling amongst them—one family in particular, the Dodges, mourns the choicest of its members. We are much grieved that this amiable family left the city without our taking leave. May Heaven preserve them.

☞ It is too frequently forgotten truth, that it is to their own exertions that individuals must look for their improvement in taste, in literature, and in science; and that here as in other cases, he who wishes to excel, must be the architect of his own fortune.

☞ A young lady out west who wished to have the one room of a log house appear to the best advantage on a certain occasion, had some trouble in keeping a large dog outside the door. After having turned him out the third or fourth time, she heard a slight tap upon the door, when supposing it to be the dog's paw, she cried out. 'Bose, you may rap as long as you're a mind to, but I won't let you in.'

It was the clergyman who had just commenced paying his addresses to her.

In the old man, nature has fulfilled her work: she loads him with her blessings; she fills him with the fruit of a well spent life, and surrounded by his children and his children's children, she rocks him softly away to a grave to which he is followed with blessing. OH! I WOULD LIKE TO MARRY.

I saw a little maiden,
Of but a teen or two,
Her cheeks were fair and rosy,
Her laughing eyes were blue,
A dainty little fairy.
Not yet a woman quite,
A modest rose bud opening,
And beaming with delight,
Said I, sweet little lady,
Did'st ever have a beau?
I'd like to kiss you dearly,
But it would scare you so,
Bright flowers bloomed around her,
For it was joyous Spring,
A thousand birds were warbling,
And she did with them sing—
Oh! I would like to marry,
If I could only find
A pretty little dearie
Just suited to my mind.

I saw another, older
By three sweet years than she,
Oh! she was matchless lovely,
Full bloomed maturity!
Her form was round and slender,
Her bosom snowy white,
Her hair in glossy ringlets,
Her eyes were sparaling bright,
Her dress was spotless muslin,
Arranged with nicest care,
A wreath of glowing flowers
Encircled her dark hair,
Her voice was witching music,
That chained me while she talked,
Her feet so small and pretty,
I wonder how she walked,
Said she, I'd like to marry,
If I could only find
A pretty little dearie
Just suited to my mind.

I find that all would marry,
From maid to matrons old,
Oh! think it not all folly,
As you are often told,
I saw an ancient maiden,
Of an uncertain age,
But she had almost fretted
Her hour on the stage,
Her brow was wrapped in wrinkles,
Her cheeks were plastered red,
Her teeth were few and broken,
Her hair had left her head,
Here then, thought I, is wisdom,
Her earthly dreams are flown,
For she is contented
To live and die alone,
Said she, I'd like to marry,
If I could only find,
Oh, Lord! just any body
A man of any kind.

Wife, who in thy deep devotion,
Puttest up a prayer for one
Sailing on the stormy ocean—
Hope no more—his course is done!

PROSPECTUS FOR 1853.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

THE LEADING LITERARY WEEKLY

Over Thirty-one years have elapsed since the Saturday Evening Post began its weekly round of blended instruction and amusement: and never, in all that period, was its success so marked as at the present moment. Possessing undeniably the largest circulation, by many thousands, of any paper of its class in the Union, its subscribers have the best of reasons for believing that it stands upon a permanent basis, and that they will receive the full value of every dollar intrusted to its publishers. In announcing some of our preparations for the coming year, we may begin by stating our continued connection with Mrs. Southworth, a writer who, in vigor and fertility of genius, is not surpassed by any, male or female, in the Union. Mrs. Caroline Lee Hentz, a lady whom it would be almost superfluous to praise, in view of the general popularity of such tales as 'The Mob Cap,' 'Eoline,' 'Linda,' 'Rena,' etc also is enrolled among our contributors

We shall shortly begin the publication of a story entitled

CLARA MORELAND.

By Emerson Bennett, author of 'Viola,' 'Prairie Flower,' 'Bandits of the Osage,' etc. And at the opening of the ensuing year we design commencing the publication of the following Novelet,

MISS THUSA'S SPINNING-WHEEL,

By Mrs. Lee Hentz, of Florida, author of 'Eoline,' 'Linda,' 'Rena,' etc

This novelet we design following by a story entitled,

A STRAY PATCH FROM AUNT HANNAH'S QUILT.

By Mrs. Frances D. Gage, of Ohio, widely known as the author of some admirably written and very effective household poems, sketches, etc. After this we expect to be able to commence

THE LOST HEIRESS:

A STORY OF HOWLET HALL.

By Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth, author of 'The Curse of Clifton,' 'Virginia and Magdalene,' 'Shannondale,' the Deserted Wife,

In addition to these and other Original tales, involving a large expenditure of money we shall lay before our readers as heretofore choice tales, sketches, essays, narratives, etc. from the English magazines, such as have given the Post a name for the excellence of its selections,

Engravings—In the way of engravings we present at least two weekly, one of an instructive and the other of a humorous character.

☞ Of course we shall maintain for the Post the character it has acquired of being a strictly moral paper, not ridiculously squeamish and straight laced, but really and truly moral; such as may be taken into the family circle without fear. Advertisements of an improper character shall be, as heretofore, rigidously excluded.

CHEAP POSTAGE.

The postage on the Post to any part of the United States, when paid quarterly in advance, is now only 26 cents a year. And we trust that the public generally will show their appreciation of this commendable reduction of postage, by largely increasing the number of papers taken at the various offices—that thus there may be no falling off in the revenue of the Post office department. This will insure a continuance of the present reduced rates.

DR. MORSE'S INVIGORATING ELIXIER OR CORDIAL;

Cure of Nervous Diseases

No language can convey an adequate idea of the immediate and almost miraculous change which it occasions in the diseased, debilitated, and shattered nervous system. Whether broken down by excess, weak by nature, or impaired by sickness, the unstrung and relaxed organization is at once rebraced, revivified, and built up. The mental and physical symptoms of nervous disease vanish together, under its influence. The stooping, trembling victim of depression and debility becomes a new man. He stands erect, he moves with a firm step; his mind, which was previously sunk in gloom, or an almost idiotic apathy, becomes bright, buoyant, active and he goes forth refreshed, regenerated, and conscious of new vigor, to his accustomed occupations. Nor is the effect temporary. On the contrary, the relief is permanent, for the cordial properties of the medicine reach the constitution itself, and restore it to its normal condition. Well may the preparation be called the MEDICINAL WONDER of the nineteenth century. It is, as the first scientific men in the old world have admitted, that miracle of medicine heretofore supposed to have no existence.

Its force is never expended, as is the case with opium, alcoholic preparations, and all other excitants. The effect of these is brief, and it may well be said of him who takes them 'the last state of that man is worse than the first.' But the Elixir is an exhilarant without a single drawback, safe in its operation perpetual in its happy influence upon the nerves, the mind, and the entire system. In cases of neuralgia, headache, loss of memory, hypochondriasis, dyspepsia, general prostration, irritability, nervousness, inability to sleep, liver complaint, and all diseases incicent to females, hysteria, monomania, vague terrors, palpitation of the heart, impotency, barrenness, constipation, etc., from whatever cause arising, it is if there is any reliance to be placed on human testimony, absolutely infallible.

It is the only infallible remedy yet discovered for Nervous, Head, and Mind Complaints; it is the mental physic long sought for, and never before found, the only natural agent that can administer to a mind diseased. It will increase and restore the appetite, strengthen the emaciated, renew the health of those who have destroyed it. induce continual cheerfulness and equanimity of spirits, and prolong life.

Persons of pale complexion or consumptive habits are restored by the use of a bottle or two to bloom and vigor, changing the skin from a pale yellow, sickly color to a beautiful florid complexion.

The common expression of those who have used this extract is—I have heard your Cordial highly spoken of but was one of the incredulous in regard to its merit, having tried various medicines sold for the same purpose without deriving any benefit. I had almost given up all hopes of deriving any relief, and when I purchased some of your Cordial I had no faith whatever of its benefitting me; but it has.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1853
THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.
THE LEADING LITERARY WEEKLY

Over Thirty-one years have elapsed since the Saturday Evening Post began its weekly round of blended instruction and amusement: and never, in all that period, was its success so marked as at the present moment. Possessing undeniably the largest circulation, by many thousands, of any paper of its class in the Union, its subscribers have the best of reasons for believing that it stands upon a permanent basis, and that they will receive the full value of every dollar intrusted to its publishers. In announcing some of our preparations for the coming year, we may begin by stating our continued connection with Mrs. Southworth, a writer who, in vigor and fertility of genius, is not surpassed by any, male or female, in the Union. Mrs. Caroline Lee Hentz, a lady whom it would be almost superfluous to praise, in view of the general popularity of such tales as 'The Mob Cap,' 'Eoline,' 'Linda,' 'Rena,' etc also is enrolled among our contributors

We shall shortly begin the publication of a story entitled

CLARA MORELAND

By Emerson Bennett, author of 'Viola,' 'Prairie Flower,' 'Bandits of the Osage,' etc. And at the opening of the ensuing year we design commencing the publication of the following Novelet,

MISS THUSA'S SPINNING-WHEEL,

By Mrs. Lee Hentz, of Florida, author of 'Eoline,' Linda,' 'Rena,' etc

This novelet we design following by a story entitled,

A STRAY PATCH FROM AUNT HANNAH'S QUILT.

By Mrs. Frances D. Gage, of Ohio, widely known as the author of some admirably written and very effective household poems, sketches, etc. After this we expect to be able to commence

THE LOST HEIRESS:
A STORY OF HQWLET HALL.

By Mrs. E. D, E, N, Southworth, author of 'The Cause of Clifton,' 'Virginia and Magdalene,' 'Shannondale,' the Deserted Wife,

In addition to these and other Original tales, involving a large expenditure of money we shall lay before our readers as heretofore choice tales, sketches, essays, narratives, etc. from the English magazines, such as have given the Post a name for the excellence of its selections,

Engravings—In the way of engravings we present at least two weekly, one of an instructive and the other of a humorous character,

☞ Of course we shall maintain for the Post the character it has acquired of being a strictly moral paper, not ridiculously squeamish and straight laced, but really and truly moral; such as may be taken into the family circle without fear. Advertisements of an improper character shall be as heretofore, rigorously excluded.

CHEAP POSTAGE.

The postage on the Post to any part of the United States, when paid quarterly in advance, is now only 26 cents a year.
